JUSTICE • EQUITY • HEALTH • SAFETY

Many kids must go over half a mile in high-crime neighborhoods across busy streets to find safe places to play. Schools in their neighborhoods, could open gyms, courts, and fields through shared use. Physical activity promotes scholastic performance, healthy weight, and self-esteem.

*Shading on maps indicate increased crime and brown areas show multiple types of crime.

DPR recreation centers, community centers, playgrounds, tennis courts, Boys and Girls Clubs, and YMCA's. *Shared Use schools had agreements on file from 2013-2015 with Department of General Services. Crime Data is from the Urban Institute 2014 Crime Map.